PROJECT SUMMARY:

Working together, students Caitlin, Gus, Maglor, and Zoe will spearhead a revival of the literary journal on campus, titled the "Sea Shanty". With submissions from students and faculty, we will provide a printed publication in the Spring semester, made up of literary submissions including poetry, short-form prose, film reviews, academic papers, photography, and more. All four students are working as a collaborative writer/editor team. We opened submissions to the campus community by utilizing our student and faculty connections. Our vision for the journal is to provide a space for freedom of expression and speech through a creative format, allowing the community to use it as an outlet for artistic exhibition. It is a chance to showcase talents under an official undergraduate publication. Reviving this journal is an attempt to harken back to the nostalgia and importance of an age of physical media, one that we want to keep from rapidly passing into the history books.
